Bueller M. Roberts Died in Sanitarium

The death of B. M. Roberts in Calgary on Tuesday, April 27th, at the Central Alberta Sanitarium, is causing widespread regret among his many friends in this district. Mr. Roberts has been ailing for some years past but his improved condition during the last three years gave the impression that he was on the road to complete recovery. However, last week he suffered a hemorrhage from which he never completely recovered, and his passing brings a sense of unexpected loss to those who knew him.

The late Mr. Roberts was an employee of the Calgary Gas and Power Co. at the time of his death. He had charge of a Men's Store in Champion for some years, but was forced to sell due to ill health. At the time he worked for the Hudson Bay Oil Co. in this territory later going to Calgary where he has resided since. Mr. Roberts was a native of Newfoundland and leaves relatives there to mourn his loss. A. S. Roberts of Barons is a brother.

Judge Jackson Will Address A.Y.P.A. Here

Hon. Judge Jackson of Lethbridge will give a talk to the A. Y. P. A. on Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the Community hall on his recent trip to the Olympic Games held in Germany. Parents and friends of Club members are cordially invited to attend. A silver collection will be taken to defray expenses.

To Attend Graduation

Mrs. J. H. Bastin left Monday night for Vancouver where she will attend the graduation of her daughter, Miss Freda Bastin, from the Vancouver General Hospital on Friday, May 14th. Miss Bastin plans to attend to practice in Vancouver for one year and at that time will leave for England where she will carry on her profession.

25 Per Cent Seeded

Warm bright weather is providing ideal conditions for seeding which is approximately 25% completed in this district. The storm of last week improved conditions and stopped seed drifting for the time being. Seventy-five applications for seed relief have been received and granted, fuel is not being distributed. Feed shipments have ceased, there being approximately $15,000 spent on this item by the municipality during the past few months. Crop acreage, although being cut down in some instances, will remain practically the same as last year.

Is Now Back At Work

J. S. Collins returned this week from Rochester where he was given medical treatment. Mr. Collins' report was quite favorable, although he is suffering from a nasal condition which is greatly irritated by the dust of this country. The condition may make it necessary for Mr. Collins to seek a different climate with at least less dust.

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank those who were so kind to me during my recent illness, also the O. E. S. and Amity Club for the beautiful flowers.

Hardly less an old wives' tale than the "monopoly" charges so frequently made, is the oft repeated charge that the oil business is gouging or planning to gouge the public for prices of its products.

The best evidence that there never has been justification for this charge is the fact that in spite of many years of being "investigated," the industry is still doing its business with prices of its products lower than ever.

Prices have fluctuated with changing conditions of supply and demand and general economic prosperity. At times there have been good profits earned. In recent times with a good many of the established companies they have been too low to provide anything like a reasonable return on capital and for service rendered. One of the largest earned only 2 1/2 percent in 1935 and part of that came from money invested, not from prices charged for products.

An 1936 sales ticket shows that the then almost useless by-product gasoline was selling at approximately the same price that is obtaining for the highly developed and efficient product of today. Today's price is only half that of the inferior gasoline that was sold in 1936.

This at least effectually answers the charge of price gouging. Art. 12

My mother begged for the priest. He put the holy oil on her, and her mind was comforted.

"Sit over by the window," Mistress O'Shea said to me. "Your mother doesn't want you to be looking at her. Paddy, she doesn't want you to remember the look of her face in the sickness."

The dip candle stuck in a bottle guttered and spent itself during the watches of that terrible night. The agonies of the destroying disease were distressing.

As the sky began to brighten with the dawn, the stifening coldness of the disease overcame my mother. Mistress O'Shea crossed herself as she covered the rigid face.

I hoisted the window to let the sun get out. Two rough-looking men with a one-horse cart came in the forenoon to take my mother's body away.

They were gathering bodies of the Catholic poor for burial in a potter's field at the east side of the city. They had started off with a load of empty board coffins, and Mr. O'Shea placed was the first to get into that trip. They placed an empty coffin on the street. They came upstairs with a heavy bag made of ducking.

I knew my mother was not yet dead because only one eye was closed. But they showed her stiff body into their bag and tied the mouth of it with a stout cord. One of the men shouldered the burden and bore it to the street. The lid of the coffin was hammered in. It was hoisted up into its place on the cart. The cart trundled off up York Street.

As we rounded the corner of Richmond Street, Dick Crispin was on his yellow taxi. Mr. Crispin had been in the service with Sir John Colborne, the governor, and his public house was now frequented by officers. The dog's sympathy and loving-kindness refreshed me; and my body felt warmer. Sobbing, I fell asleep.

CHAPTER IV.

Early in the morning, himself woke me right smartly by clashing a bucket of water into my face. He was in the devil's own temper; and he had me cornered. Yet he stood back in the doorway with his chin hollowed in the air, like a hegcat on a hillside. I thought I was in for a beating; but fear of the plague kept him from laying hands on me. I got a tongue-thrashing instead.

"Dear! Dear! What can the matter be?" I exclaimed the good woman. "Is it a twist of the colic you're having, John?"

She found her husband calling loudly to his Heavenly Father to show cause why John Trueman's pension should be increased at night, with stray cats and dirty little gutter-birds, mousing the place up and spreading disease.

"Why, Lord a mercy!" Himself exclaimed. "Woman! it's matter enough!"

The excited man, roasting helplessly at a crying little creature, may have felt ungratified in the presence of his wife. Off he strode into the house, making strange noises in blowing through his clothes lips and tossing his beard about with his left hand. I was glad to see the heels of him.

Sarah Trueman looked me over. I must have been a miserable-looking fellow. The old man on his ragged pants and a portion of a blue shirt; and one of my shoes was sole-less. Well I remember the peculiar moment in which I was received into the Trueman household—not and penniless, neither naked nor clothed, barefoot nor shod.

"Paddy, what have you been doing here all night?" she asked me in her quiet, gentle way.

"Sure, Mrs. Trueman," said I, "my mother died from me, and I'd no place at all to go to."

"You poor child!" she exclaimed, "just where have you been?"

A wooden wash-tub was landed out into the stable. The Trueman girls fetched out, hanging on a stoat pole, a large black hen pot of boiling water. I was sent with a pail to the rain barrel.

"None—scrub yourself, Paddy," Mrs. Trueman directed me, "and make a job of it."

Rain water and cold soap are great for a lather; and I did my duty. Half a cup of carbolic acid was added to the tub before I got through. Then I was set to washing my pants and shirt in the curbed water. Old clothes and a pair of boots belonging to my mother were handed out to me. A pail of unluckied line in chunks the size of hen's eggs was sprinkled on the stable floor.

I was given my breakfast in the back kitchen. There were no lumps in the porridge the Trueman girls made. Then I was given a cup of a lazy housekeeper. Fresh eaten meal was boiled for many hours, cooking slowly in a large pot.

A big bowl of it was given me; and I was told to eat it up. I poured maple syrup as thick as molasses. I could feel my bowels stirring and stretching up within me, and I was told to eat it up.

"No wonder old Joe was told to cure God with three hundred of them about his place!"

"No wonder, father dear," exclaimed his daughter Violet, as she bobbed him a little courtesy, "no one ever faulted old Joe's beautiful daughters."

His women folk treated John Trueman as something to be put up with, just like the Canadian climate.

Then I got a plate of potato cakes, piping hot with butter melting into the richness of their scabby brown bodies. Sarah Trueman was a wonderful cook; anything she put her hands to turned out well. Her potato cakes were composed of mashed potato and baked in a hot oven.

Richard Faber was the first American to make a rubber-tipped pencil. America's first successful pencil and pencil manufacturer, he founded his business in 1861.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to go

The liver should pour out two pints of bile every day. If it does not, it gets clogged in the bowels, and the bile is not absorbed. The bile is not absorbed, and the bile is not absorbed.

That they were talking about me behind my back, William Marshall had driven into town the day before. His wife was the eldest of the Trueman girls and for years the couple had been busy clearing a bush farm up country. He was a youngish looking man in the face, but his body was set and stiffened a little with hard work—a kind and manly man he was, quiet and sensible in his ways for the huge bulk of him.

The Trueman women were right fond of William Marshall. I could see it in their eyes as they moved about. Casual-like, he came out and spoke to me.

After a while, back he came again, and stood looking me over.

"How would you like, Patrick," he asked me in his slow, deliberate way, "to go out and live in the country?"

"I'd like, sir," said I, "to have a home and I'd work hard."

A Quebec Adventure Two Gentlemen From Toronto Attempt To Cultivate The Bon Accord

Two gentlemen from Toronto, when they shall call Mr. Bon and Mr. Entente, entertain such lively affection for Quebec that they recently talked themselves into embarking upon a motor trip into the heart of that province. Mr. Bon was particularly enthusiastic, as he had seen French phrases which he was used to say to someone. Passing upon the road a trudging peddler with an enormous pack, Mr. Bon suggested that here was his opportunity to talk French and to hear French talked and to cultivate the friendship of the kind people of Quebec. Accordingly, Mr. Entente stopped the car and invited the peddler to come aboard, which he at once did, squeezing his pack through the rear doorway.

"Comment vous portez-vous?" tried Mr. Bon, offering a cigarette.

The passenger, in the back seat, grunted, taking the cigarette.

"On allez-vous?" suggested Mr. Bon, ironically trying to recall the versions out of his heroic past in the France of the P.R.E.

The passenger grunted again. Mr. Entente intruded: "You come from Montreal?" he asked the peddler.

"Non," from Toronto — Spadina avenue."

It turned out that his name was Kotzebue, and he had been born in Poland. The Printed Word.

Little Helps For This Week

Giving thanks unto the Father which has made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints of light. Col. 1:12.

The souls most precious to us are those who have been saved.

May from this home have fled. But still we make them household.

One Lord is still our Lord. One God is still our God.

They remind their Lord's affairs. And if we bring our work to him, we find it all in his hands.

We are apt to feel that nothing we do on earth bears any relation to what the good are doing in a higher world. It is not so. Heaven and earth are not so far apart. Every disinterested act, every sacrifice to duty, every exertion for the good of one of the lost of our Saviour's brethren, every new impulse given to the love of truth and goodness, associates us with the departed, brings us nearer to them, and is as truly heavenly as if we were acting not on earth but in heaven.

The spiritual tie between us and the departed is not felt as it should be. We do not feel that their good works are as truly heavenly as if we were acting not on earth but in heaven.

As the plant of the Carman gay Sun has been sold we are sending out the Carman gay news under the heading of the Champion Chronicle. There is going to be some change made but just what form it is going to take has not yet been decided, and as we have been busy with other things we have not got straightened out again.

It is evident that there is work going on on the land these days by the absence of farmers in town.
